Kobe Accuser's Story Detailed

EAGLE, COLO. | The woman who accused Kobe Bryant of rape told police a flirtatious encounter quickly turned ugly when he grabbed her by the neck, bent her over a chair and attacked her from behind, repeatedly asking, "You're not going to tell anyone, right?," a detective testified Thursday.

The 19-year-old woman was raped after agreeing to go to Bryant's suite at the resort where she worked, Eagle County Sheriff's Detective Doug Winters said at a preliminary hearing that will determine whether Bryant will stand trial on sexual assault charges.

Bryant, 25, has denied raping the woman and said the sex was consensual. The L.A. Lakers star faces a possible prison term of four years to life if convicted.

Judge Frederick Gannett, who said he would not rule Thursday on whether to proceed to trial, rejected defense requests to have the woman testify and to see her medical records.

The hearing began as hundreds of reporters and a handful of spectators gathered at the courthouse to catch a glimpse of Bryant. (AP)

Malvo To Plead Insanity

Sniper suspect Muhammad influenced teen, defense says

FAIRFAX, VA. | Lee Boyd Malvo's lawyers said Thursday they will mount an insanity defense at his murder trial in the Washington area sniper case, arguing that the teenager was a victim of "indoctrination" by the older John Allen Muhammad.

Defense attorney Craig Cooley said that indoctrination is a form of mental illness and that it will ultimately be up to a jury to decide if it amounts to insanity.

The prosecutor in the case, Fairfax County Commonwealth's Attorney Robert F. Horan Jr., said that he has reviewed the reports of a court-appointed mental-health expert and that there was nothing to suggest mental illness on Malvo's part.

But Cooley said the insanity defense is not based on the work of the court-appointed expert, but on experts who were retained privately and examined Malvo.

Meanwhile, in Manassas, the judge in the Muhammad case ruled Thursday that the 42-year-old Muhammad cannot present any mental-health evidence at his own trial because he refused to submit to an examination sought by prosecutors.

Malvo is scheduled to stand trial beginning Nov. 10; Muhammad goes on trial Tuesday.

Lloyd Scott has just spent 12 days at the bottom of Loch Ness, but he reported no signs of the lake's legendary monster. Scott began the trek, which raised money for the charity Children with Leukemia, on Sept. 28. (AP)

Nearly All Food in United States Soon to Be Monitored

Virtually every food product in the United States will soon have to be registered along with its supplier as part of the fight against terrorism. Figuring that the best way to protect the nation's food supply is to keep better tabs on it, the government is requiring some 400,000 facilities in the United States to register their products with the Food and Drug Administration. Anyone importing food from abroad will have to give regulators advance notice. (AP)

Members of the American Anglican Council meeting file their signed action statements asking the Anglican Church to reverse U.S. Episcopal Church policies on gays.

Episcopalian Group Slams U.S. Church

Conservatives decry growing acceptance of gays in denomination

DALLAS | With a schism in the Episcopal Church looking ever more likely, angry conservatives formally denounced the denomination's growing acceptance of gay relationships Thursday and pleaded with Anglican bishops worldwide to help them reorganize the American church.

Conservatives ended an emotional three-day meeting by issuing a declaration that demands church leaders repent. It also looks to overseas Anglican bishops to "guide the realignment" of the denomination.

Although the situation is volatile, the gathering sponsored by the American Anglican Council gave a huge boost to an emerging conservative network that could evolve into a new denomination separate from the existing Episcopal Church.

The issue of whether there's a binding scriptural ban on gay sex has long been disputed by conservatives and liberals, but two votes this summer at the Episcopal national convention brought the issue to a boiling point.

One confirmed the election of a gay cleric, who has a longtime partner, as bishop of New Hampshire, while the other acknowledged that some bishops are allowing blessings of same-sex unions. The conservatives' declaration repudiated those actions, saying they broke "fellowship with the larger body of Christ."

Mayor Says He's Not Being Investigated

Street renews call for FBI to explain why it bugged his office

PHILADELPHIA | Mayor John F. Street tried to get his re-election campaign back on track Thursday after FBI bugging devices were discovered in his office, insisting that he has done nothing wrong and that prosecutors have assured him he is not the target of the investigation.

He and other politicians called on the FBI to say who is being investigated — something the FBI refused to do for the third straight day.

The devices were found Tuesday by police conducting a routine sweep of Street's City Hall office suite.

Three federal law enforcement officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity, acknowledged that the FBI was responsible for the bugs, but did not provide further details.

Federal officials are known to be investigating the city's contracts with some private companies. City officials also have confirmed that the FBI is investigating allegations that the city department that handles appeals of parking citations had fixed some tickets in exchange for bribes.

Street campaign advisers have accused the Bush administration Justice Department of planting the bug, or at least refusing to release information about it, as part of a calculated plan to embarrass the Democratic mayor weeks before the Nov. 4 election. DAVID B. CARUSO (AP)

Democrats Spar Over Credentials, Taxes, Medicare

PHOENIX | The Democratic presidential candidates met Thursday in their fourth debate in five weeks, with disputes over middle-class tax cuts, Medicare and their commitment to party values dominating the fall campaign.

The 90-minute debate, broadcast live on CNN, is the first since Sen. Bob Graham of Florida abandoned his 5-month-old campaign Monday after determining he could not win.

Polls show Dean tied or ahead in Iowa and New Hampshire, the first major contests of 2004. (AP)

Study: Broken Hearts Can Really Hurt

WASHINGTON | A rejected lover's broken heart may cause as much distress in a pain center of the brain as an actual physical injury.

California researchers have found a physiological basis for social pain by monitoring the brains of people who thought they had been maliciously excluded from a computer game by other players.

The shock and distress of this rejection registered in the same part of the brain, called the anterior cingulate cortex, that also responds to physical pain, researchers said.

"The ACC is the same part of the brain that has been found to be associated with the unpleasantness of physical pain," study author Naomi Eisenberger, a UCLA scientist, said.

The study suggests that social exclusion of any sort — divorce, not being invited to a party, being turned down for a date — would cause distress in the ACC. (AP)

Guantanamo Probe Begins

Investigators look for breaches at U.S. camp for terrorism suspects

GUANTANAMO BAY NAVAL STATION, CUBA | Two dozen investigators began searching for possible security breaches Thursday at the U.S. prison camp for terror suspects, where espionage charges have heightened tensions among soldiers.

On Wednesday, investigators from the Miami-based U.S. Southern Command reported to the island, following by a day the arrival of five non-American-born Arabic interpreters contracted by the same company that employed an American translator accused of spying.

Investigators will try to establish how a translator already under investigation obtained secret clearance and was allowed onto the base, and how a second translator managed to leave with classified information. In addition, a Muslim chaplain is under investigation after allegedly leaving with diagrams of the prison layout.

The new translators, from San Diego-based Titan Corp., came here as officials sought to boost security by closely monitoring e-mail messages, asking troops to report suspicious behavior and postponing the assignment of another Muslim chaplain.

The prison camp, first established Jan. 11, 2002, has grown to 660 detainees suspected of having links to al Qaeda's terror network or Afghanistan's ousted Taliban regime. PAISLEY DODDS (AP)

Texas Lawmakers Set On Redistricting Plan

Tentative agreement ends impasse, clears way for Friday vote

AUSTIN, TEXAS | State lawmakers reached an agreement Thursday on a new congressional map that would put the delegation in Republican control, fending off last-minute GOP infighting about how to divide up the seats.

The new map would add as many as seven Republicans to Texas' congressional delegation, currently dominated by Democrats 17-15.

The announcement paved the way for a vote Friday in the House and Senate and appeared to end months of squabbling over redistricting that included two walk-outs by Democrats who sought to block a vote.

Gov. Rick Perry is expected to sign the bill if it passes.

Gerry Hebert, an attorney for most Texas Democrats in the legislature and Congress, said a court challenge will be filed.

Democrats boycotted the Texas legislature twice this year to block a quorum and kill redistricting bills.

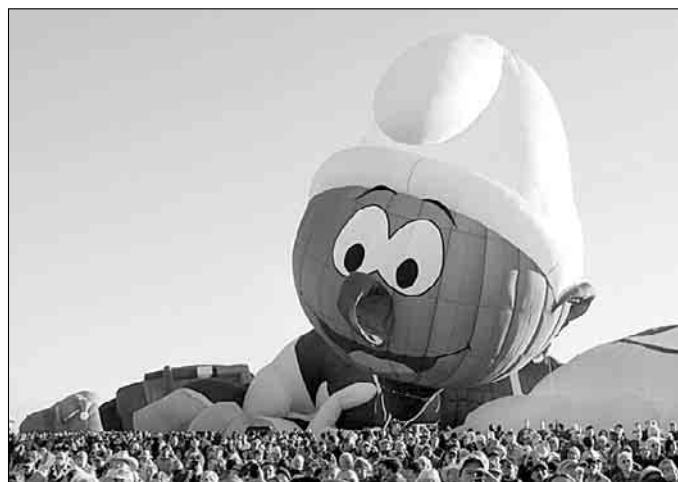

Texas Gov. Rick Perry unveils a map of the redistricting plan, which would likely send more Republicans to Congress.

House Democrats fled to Oklahoma in May, and Senate Democrats went to New Mexico for six weeks beginning in late July to block a vote.

The Democrats returned when one of their own defected, giving Republicans the quorum they needed to do business. APRIL CASTRO (AP)

Suicide Bomber Hits Shiite Area

Gunmen kill Spanish military attache just before Baghdad blast

BAGHDAD | A suicide car bomber crashed into a police station in Iraq's largest Shiite Muslim enclave, killing himself, nine others and injuring as many as 45. About 30 minutes earlier, gunmen shot dead a Spanish military attache at his home.

Some 50 policemen had gathered in the police station's courtyard at about 8:30 a.m. to collect their pay when a white Oldsmobile sped up. Two policemen on guard duty at the gate opened fire, but the car went through, crashing into a parked vehicle and exploding.

Across town in the upscale Mansour area, a Spaniard identified as Jose Antonio Bernal Gomez, an air force sergeant attached to Spain's National Intelligence Center, was shot to death after four men, one dressed as a Muslim cleric, knocked on his door at about 8 a.m., according to a Spanish diplomat.

A guard in the area said Gomez opened the door to the gunmen. When they tried to grab him, he ran outside, and was shot. The guard said he heard six shots, and Gomez was hit in the head at least once. The assailants' motives and identities were not clear.

Palestinians Delay Vote On Cabinet

Some officials say frustrated new P.M. is threatening to quit

RAMALLAH, WEST BANK | Palestinian Prime Minister Ahmed Qureia suffered a severe blow Thursday when legislators failed to vote on his Cabinet, casting doubt on his future and the fate of his plan to reach a comprehensive truce with Israel.

Qureia

In a heated closed-door meeting with Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat, Qureia suggested he no longer wanted to be prime minister, just four days after taking office, officials said. Arafat's spokesman said there were "serious differences," but denied Qureia had threatened to resign.

Qureia's success is key to efforts to salvage the U.S.-backed "road map" peace plan, which outlines a path to ending three years of violence and establishing a Palestinian state by 2005. LARA SUKHIAN (AP)

TORONTO | Canada's Supreme Court refused Thursday to let conservative religious and family groups appeal a court ruling that legalized same-sex marriage in Ontario.

Osaka's Subway: No-Grope Express

City's busiest line now has a car just for women, all day long

TOKYO | Faced with widespread complaints that women passengers are regularly subjected to groping, the most crowded subway in Japan's second-largest city has decided to offer women-only cars all day long, officials said Thursday.

Since last November, the Midosuji subway line has designated one car on each of its 10-car trains as off-limits to men. But amid complaints that that hasn't solved the problem, the Osaka Municipal Transportation Bureau now plans to expand the service from the current 5 a.m. to 9 a.m. until the last train leaves after midnight.

Osaka is just one of several cities that began the women-only cars in an attempt to crack down on groping incidents. Several lines in Tokyo have women-only cars, too.

Some passengers of both genders have groused that reserving just one car for women creates overcrowding in the other cars, or gives the impression that women who are on the mixed carriages don't mind being groped. (AP)

Putin Won't Rule Out Preemptive Strike

YEKATERINBURG, RUSSIA | President Vladimir Putin said Thursday that Russia opposes the use of preventive military attacks but will reserve the right to carry out such strikes if the practice continues to be used by other countries.

Putin's comments, delivered at a meeting with German Chancellor Gerhard Schroder, were a clear jab at the United States, which attacked Iraq despite opposition from Russia and other U.N. Security Council members.

While the statements do not indicate a significant change in policy, the comments reflect Russian concern about the military clout of the United States, which was left as the world's sole superpower following the 1991 collapse of the Soviet Union. (AP)

Police Suspect Gangs in Mt. Pleasant Shootings

WASHINGTON | One man was killed and a Metrobus driver wounded Thursday afternoon in what authorities described as a "running gun battle" through the streets of Mount Pleasant in Northwest Washington.

Five suspects were under arrest and two guns recovered. "It looks like it's gang-related," said Metropolitan Police Chief Charles H. Ramsey.

The unidentified Metrobus driver was behind the wheel of the Route

Ramsey

42 bus when a bullet came through the front windshield. "He's fine. ... He has non-life-threatening injuries," said Metro Transit Police Chief Polly Hanson. A third person was grazed by either a bullet or flying glass, but not seriously hurt.

Several vehicles with bullet holes could be seen over a four block stretch.

Gang violence has been a growing problem in the neighborhood. Four people were killed between mid-July and early August, in what police have blamed on rivalries between Latino gangs.

Mercury Traces Found on Metrobus

WASHINGTON | Traces of mercury have been found on a Metrobus, but transit officials said Thursday passengers and workers are not in any danger.

The bus was tainted by a Ballou High School student last week, after mercury was spilled there. It was run for several days until pulled from service. Seven drivers who operated the bus were getting blood tests. Officials said the risk is probably negligible.

Meanwhile, a top official with the D.C. Public Schools said Thursday that a high school administrator failed to comprehend the potential health threats to dozens of students exposed to mercury.

"I don't believe the school understood the gravity of the situation," said Chief of Staff Elfreda Massie.

Senate Support Grows To Protect Gun Makers

WASHINGTON | Gun manufacturers and distributors appear close to getting Congress to exempt them from lawsuits blaming them for gun crimes and seeking millions of dollars in damages.

Sen. Larry Craig (R-Idaho) has 44 Republican co-sponsors for such a bill. Despite a threatened filibuster by some Democrats — which would require 60 votes to break — the bill also has the support of 10 Democrats, among them Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle of South Dakota. He began promoting the legislation after gun supporters agreed to specify that firearms manufacturers and distributors would not be protected from lawsuits involving defective products or illegal sales.

Thirty-three states already have laws exempting gun manufacturers and distributors. The House in April passed the bill to extend the prohibition nationwide and President Bush has said he would sign it. JESSE J. HOLLAND (AP)

Assault Account Detailed

EAGLE, COLO. | Eagle County Sheriff's Detective Doug Winters — testifying at a preliminary hearing that will determine whether Bryant will stand trial on sexual assault charges — described in graphic detail for a packed courtroom how the woman said she excitedly met the Los Angeles Lakers' star in the lobby but left the hotel in tears after a vicious attack.

It began with a tour of the resort on June 30 that led to some flirting. She went back to Bryant's room and, after some conversation, showed him a tattoo on her back, then turned down his request to join him in the hot tub, Winters said.

Her shift at the front desk was ending and she wanted to go home, he said. When she turned around to go, Bryant grabbed her by the neck from behind, pulled up her skirt and raped her against a chair, Winters said. She told investigators she told Bryant "no" at least twice before bursting into tears.

During and after the rape, Winters said, Bryant kept asking, "You're not going to tell anyone, right?" She said she agreed at one point. The woman said that Bryant forced her to kiss his penis after the attack. Bryant has said the sex was consensual. TIM DAHLBERG (AP)

NFL Warns Redskins, Buccaneers

Arrington, Sapp spat not allowed on field

PRO FOOTBALL | The NFL weighed in on the LaVar Arrington-Warren Sapp spat with a stern warning: If Sapp prances through the Washington Redskins' jumping jacks, he's going to get flagged.

The NFL on Thursday told both the Tampa Bay Buccaneers and Redskins that no pregame hostilities will be tolerated when the two teams meet Sunday.

Specifically, the Bucs were told that it is not permissible to run through opponents' formations during pregame stretching. Sapp has been known for doing just that.

"The Buccaneers have been notified that it's not permitted, and it will result in a 15-yard penalty," NFL spokesman Greg Aiello said. If a fight breaks out before the game, the participants will be subject to ejection.

The warning comes a day after Arrington called Sapp's pregame actions disrespectful and threatened to retaliate if Sapp did the same against the Redskins.

Wood and Prior Are the Cubs' Dynamic Duo

PRO BASEBALL | Kerry Wood keeps catching compliments. Especially the one about how he and Mark Prior are going to pitch their way to a World Series championship, the way Randy Johnson and Curt Schilling did.

Only one problem. It's not properly respectful — to Arizona's dynamic duo who won the World Series two years ago.

"Obviously, we haven't done what those guys have done throughout their careers," Wood said.

Maybe, but they've done a good impression lately, posting all of the Cubs' wins in this postseason.

After Prior claimed a victory Wednesday, Wood will pitch Friday in game three of the National League Championship Series against the Florida Marlins.

Second Test Confirms White Used Stimulant

TRACK | A second urine sample showed that U.S. sprinter Kelli White used a stimulant during the August world championships, where she won two gold medals, the International Association of Athletics Federations said Thursday. The results confirmed an earlier test that indicated White had ingested modafinil, a medication used to treat a sleep disorder, said a spokesman for the IAAF.

U.S. officials must now decide whether the case constitutes a doping offense — which would cost White both her medals. (AP)

Bloody Good

'Kill Bill' is as violent, quirky and obsessive as Tarantino himself

FILM | Simultaneously exhilarating and infuriating, "Kill Bill — Vol. 1" is about everything and nothing at once.

Quentin Tarantino's first film in six years is an unabashed celebration of style over substance, of carefully choreographed fight sequences that result in cartoonishly crude violence — all edited at a relentless pace.

It's both an homage to the film genres the writer-director loves (Japanese anime, Chinese martial-arts movies, Italian spaghetti Westerns, blaxploitation flicks) and to himself.

The uniform that the Japanese gangsters wear is straight out of "Reservoir Dogs," which turned Tarantino into a god among film geeks in 1992. And the melancholy surf guitar in the film's opening song brings to mind Dick Dale's "Miserlou," which famously punctuated the "Pulp Fiction" opening credits in 1994.

"Kill Bill" is yet another opportunity for Tarantino to show off his pathologically obsessive eye for detail — and another opportunity to showcase "Pulp Fiction" star Uma Thurman, here playing an assassin who seeks revenge on the former comrades who tried to kill her on her wedding day.

The yellow track suit Thurman wears when she takes on 88 samurai-sword wielding thugs is an exact replica of the outfit Bruce Lee wore in "Game Of Death." And during the climactic showdown between Thurman's character and Lucy Liu's in a Japanese garden, the snow seems to fall in perfect time to the music.

Then, just when "Kill Bill" really gets going, it abruptly ends — the result of Miramax's maddening decision to release the original three-hour film in two parts.

"Vol. 1," at least, is enormously entertaining, a sensory overload with some moments of true inspiration and dark humor amid the carnage. The cliffhanger ending is a doozy, and it'll make you want to come back for "Kill Bill — Vol. 2" in

February. CHRISTY

Smooth Storyteller

MUSIC | Cassandra Wilson prefers not to sing standards, but rather to set her own standards that easily cross musical borders. She shuns the jazz singer's traditional accompaniment of piano and horns, choosing to complement her deep, husky voice with a soundscape dominated by guitars and percussion.

On her latest recording, "Glamoured" (Blue Note) Wilson again infuses her jazz feeling into a variety of genres: country (a yearning version of Willie Nelson's "Crazy"); rock (Sting's "Fragile," filtered through a Brazilian prism); soul (the ballad "If Loving You Is Wrong"); folk-rock (Bob Dylan's "Lay, Lady, Lay," laid atop a loping bass and percussive groove); and blues (a funky, rollicking romp through Muddy Waters's "Honey Bee").

Half of the 12 tracks are Wilson originals — four of them co-written by the CD's producer, Italian guitarist Fabrizio Sotti. "I Want More" has allusions to rap as Wilson navigates the rapid-fire lyrics by slipping from singing into speaking, while "Heaven Knows" is a smooth bossa nova. The bluesy "On This Train" evokes a rail journey with a chugging percussive groove and a wailing guitar.

The CD closes with a touching duet with bassist Reginald Veal on "Throw It Away," a song by Abbey Lincoln, one of Wilson's main mentors, with whom she shares an affinity for improvisatory imagination and knowing how to put a story

Celtics vs. Nets

TELEVISION | Alex Kingston turns in a terrific, mud-spattered performance in "Warrior Queen" on "Masterpiece Theatre" (Sun., 9 p.m., PBS). She brings great passion to the role as Britain's first-century Queen Boudica, the cudgel-wielding beauty who united Celtic tribes against Rome's mighty armies.

Lovely, if bloody, to behold, "Queen" also features a sophisticated screenplay. Screenwriter Andrew Davies mixes rousing speeches with contemporary vernacular to create a slyly subversive statement about modern imperial adventures.

While Boudica exhorts her warriors with rhetoric that seems equal parts "Xena" and Shakespeare, the Romans speak in a jarring combination of corporate techno-babble and military jargon. Their accents are unmistakably American.

Fans of "Masterpiece Theatre" should also enjoy this story's overlap with "I, Claudius." Jack Shepherd plays the stuttering emperor as somewhat sympathetic to the British. But he's soon dispatched and the crown falls to the decadent Nero (Andrew Lee Potts).

As we all know, Nero's a cruel and deranged imperial bully. He sends a reluctant military to distant Britain to destroy a proud people, defile their land and trample on their gods. But first they get their tunics bloodied by Kingston's bodacious Boudica. KEVIN MCDONOUGH

The Marrying Kind

FILM | The trouble with "Intolerable Cruelty" isn't with George Clooney or Catherine Zeta-Jones, whose chemistry is so scorching you leave the theater with singed eyebrows.

The trouble is that the Coen brothers — writer Joel and director Ethan — wear out their running gags two-thirds of the way through the film.

It's too bad, because the script (which they wrote with Robert Ramsey and Matthew Stone) has the kind of witty banter that recalls the romantic comedies of the 1940s, and Clooney's matinee-idol looks make him a natural for Miles Massey, the most successful divorce lawyer in Los Angeles.

Zeta-Jones, as his scheming client, Marilyn Rexroth, is glamorous beyond all physical possibility.

Marilyn's ex-husband, the real-estate developer Rex Rexroth (Edward Herrmann), initially walked into Miles's office after a private investigator catches him bouncing around a motel room with a lingerie-clad blonde.

GAME, SET, MATCH: Revenge is sweeter when it's impeccably dressed.

Miles wins the case for Rex, and Marilyn ends up with nothing. To get revenge, Marilyn marries gullible oil tycoon Howard Doyle (Billy Bob Thornton) and has Miles draw up a "Massey prenup."

This touches off a seemingly endless cycle of marriage and manipulation that quickly wears out its welcome. Clooney mugs for the camera as the film lurches toward a slapstick conclusion.

The fabulous Marilyn, meanwhile, is so thinly drawn, it's hard to care about her; she's a gold-digger, she dresses beautifully, and that's about it.

Still, she and Clooney make the film tolerable, at least for a while. CHRISTY LEMIRE (AP)

Living History

Red Sox and Yankees write a new chapter in their storied rivalry

PRO BASEBALL | The rivalry has been fueled by resentments as ancient as the sale of Babe Ruth and as recent as Roger Clemens's 306th victory. For every excruciating loss by the Red Sox in direct competition with the Yankees, their fans have endured a dozen painful reminders that baseball is an unbalanced equation.

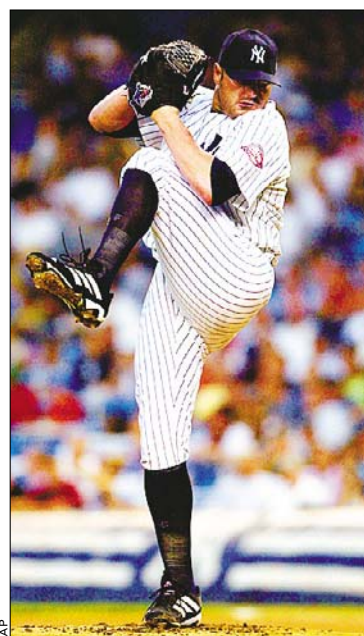

When Wade Boggs — a five-time batting champion in Boston — celebrated his lone World Series title, he was dressed in Yankee pinstripes. History is replete with stories of former Red Sox players who went on to earn championships with the Yankees.

Among them is Roger Clemens — the ace of the 1986 Sox team that lost to the New York Mets in the World Series — who has won his only titles in New York. On Saturday, Clemens is scheduled to pitch against Pedro Martinez in what might turn out to be Clemens's final appearance in Boston's Fenway Park. He has said he will retire at the end of the season.

Clemens pitched against the Red Sox in the playoffs in 1999, the first time the teams played against each other in the postseason. It was a one-sided series, with the Yankees winning in five games, four of which were tightly played, in the best-of-seven American League Championship Series. Boston derived satisfaction from a third-game rout of Clemens, who later gloried in the first of his two world championships with the Yankees.

The teams have engaged in a handful of great races since Sox owner Harry Frazee sold Ruth to Jacob Ruppert's Yankees in 1920. They have finished No. 1 and 2 in their league or division in 15 of the 84 seasons since then.

On only two of those occasions, in 1986 and 1995, was the order Boston 1, New York 2. Although they seemingly have been at each others' throats for the better part of a century, only twice have they battled for top honors on the final day of the regular season — in 1949 and in the epic playoff encounter of 1978.

But they have fought regardless of whether or not a pennant was at stake. They fought on May 30, 1938, before the largest official crowd in Yankee Stadium history (81,841). In the course of a Memorial Day doubleheader, Jake Powell became enraged at threatening pitches by Boston's Archie McKain and charged the mound. He was intercepted by Joe Cronin, the Red Sox shortstop and manager. The two slugged each other repeatedly, earning ejections from the game. Each was fined and suspended for 10 days.

Fourteen years later, responding to Jimmy Piersall's insults about the size of his nose, Billy Martin took on the Boston outfielder in a tunnel at Fenway Park.

In 1973, catchers Thurman Munson and Carlton Fisk rolled around in the dirt after a collision at home plate in Boston. That set the stage for a wild brawl in 1976 precipitated by Lou Piniella's hard slide into Fisk at Yankee Stadium. Both dugouts and bullpens emptied after the pair exchanged a few harsh words and shoves. In the aftermath, pitcher Bill Lee was pummeled by Mickey Rivers and then Graig Nettles.

In the realm of past offenses, recall that the Yankees' Roger Maris broke Ruth's single-season home run record in 1961 with a drive against Boston.

And there's no question that Ted Williams suffered in comparison to Joe DiMaggio even aside from the championships (Williams never won a World Series ring, while DiMaggio won nine). In 1941, when Williams batted .406, the Yankee Clipper drew more attention by hitting in 56 consecutive games and was honored as the AL MVP. Six years later, Williams won the Triple Crown and still finished second to DiMaggio in MVP voting.

Management has changed over the years, but the sentiment isn't much different. In response to the recruiting battle over pitcher Jose Contreras last winter, Red Sox President Larry Lucchino referred to the Yankees as the "Evil Empire." George Steinbrenner was not amused. Of course, the Yankees got their man. JOE GERGEN (NEWSDAY)

Comparing | Blending In

A blender is a blender is a blender — or so we've always thought. After all, other than a sleek design or a choice of a dozen different speeds, basically they all do the same thing: whirl stuff around.

Or do they?

Suddenly, there's a dizzying array of blenders on the market, with prices from $15 to $600 and designs from Art Nouveau curvy to Humvee-like industrial. After putting several models through their paces, we learned that how well they work is as wide-ranging as their looks. VALLI HERMAN-COHEN (L.A. TIMES)

THE CLASSIC

→ What's the difference: The Waring 60th anniversary model's cloverleaf-shaped glass jar, waterfall base and high-low toggle power switch are identical to the 1930s Waring Bar Blender. Reissued models with bright colors, fancy finishes and pulse features upgrade the design.

→ What we thought: The Waring loves a small batch of cocktails, not the hot, messy workaday duties of a busy kitchen (although it did make exceptional mayonnaise). The skimpy 1-cup-capacity limit for blending hot liquids makes tiresome work of pureeing soup.

Other models about as good cost $100 less.

→ How much: $149.95 at Williams-Sonoma.

ICE IT, BABY

→ What's the difference: With a wide, squat container and crevice-free speed control pads, the KitchenAid Ultra Power 5-Speed blender delivered a significant design change when it was introduced.

→ What we thought: Sure, it looks cool, crushes ice well and doesn't splatter hot liquids, but it's no champion.

A trough in the wider container captures ingredients, leaving gloppy, choppy stuff in the bottom. Unless you can palm a basketball, the large jar base is hard to twist off. Skip it.

→ How much: $99.95 at many kitchen supply and department stores and Web sites.

ONLY FOR PROS

→ What's the difference: The 13-pound, 20-inch tall Vita-Prep 1002 by Vita-Mix Food Service has a generous 8-cup capacity, an enormously strong motor, and black rubber lid as big as a plunger. It looks as if it could guard Buckingham Palace.

→ What we thought: Only serious cooks need apply — and tall, rich ones too. It so powerfully pulverized smoothie ingredients that hardly a strawberry seed was visible after only 20 seconds, but the extra power is tricky for a novice. Running on high for four minutes, the metal base and blades became so hot, they cooked the mayonnaise into scrambled eggs.

→ How much: $389 at restaurant and serious chef supply stores.

THE FAVORITE

→ What's the difference: The Waring Commercial Drink Mixer adds a streamlined, twist-off jar base to the 44-ounce glass container. A hefty, one-half horsepower motor, brushed stainless steel exterior and high, low and pulse speeds make this model simple but serious.

→ What we thought: The overall winner. It performed all tasks the best. The wide-mouth container allowed easy access and visibility; the flip-open fill cap opened easily and neat freaks will like a jar base that comes off for cleaning.

→ How much: $199.95 at Williams-Sonoma. (L.A. TIMES)

GLOSSARY | RECESSED LIGHTING

Trims or styles

Baffles can minimize glare in lighting applications.

The most economical choice for recessed downlighting in the Open style.

Reflectors maximize light output in residential and commercial environments.

Eyeballs provide adjustable/directional lighting applications.

Lenses diffuse light, shield the lamp and are ideal for closets, bathrooms.

Bulb styles

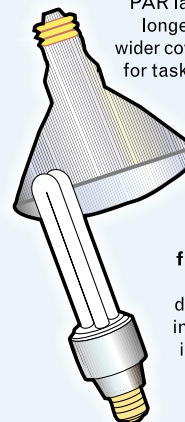

Standard light bulbs can be used in reflector and lens-fitted trims for general lighting applications.

PAR bulbs

Parabolic aluminized reflector, or PAR lamps, have built-in reflectors and are used for general lighting, "wall washing" and display lighting.

PAR lamps provide longer beams and wider coverage - ideal for task and general lighting.

Compact fluorescents cannot be dimmed when installed in an incandescent can.

LIGHTEN UP: Unlike track lighting, you can't add or subtract later with recessed lighting. Err on the side of extra locations, and make sure that the system is on two switches or dimmers. Remember, a recessed fixture doesn't provide nearly as much light as a standard fixture, because most of its light is pointed at the floor, rather than reflected off the ceiling. (AP)

Clean and Methodical

CLEANING | Mmm, lemony-ginger flooring. The yummy Method line of household cleansers, which made its name this year with designer dispensers and fresh flavors (mandarin kitchen cleaner, green tea hand soap), is delivering a low blow. Floor cleaners in lemon-ginger and french lavender are the latest additions to the line (along with plain bottles of dish soap for those who want to bypass the stubborn Karim Rashid squeeze bottles). Rumor has it that wipes will be available before the end of the year. Method is available at Target and Safeway, or see www.methodhome.com. (EXPRESS)

TO THE EDITOR

I AM AN ART HISTORIAN and I would like to clarify a common misconception about Grant Wood's painting "American Gothic" perpetuated in your Oct. 8 item about the largest ball of twine in the world.

The item mentioned that the woman in Wood's painting was a "farm wife." Actually the woman is a spinster and the man at her side is her father (the models were Wood's sister and his dentist).

Wood intended to show the imminent demise of the family farm in Depression-era America through a man too old to work and woman who must leave the farm to find work in the city since she has no husband.

Since Washington, D.C., is such a culturally literate town, I felt your readers would like to know this.

Horoscope | Stella Wilder

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) — When you come up against a stubborn competitor, do your best to soften his or her outlook. Soon you can begin to work together.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) — Someone may be trying to get your attention — but, ultimately, for the wrong reasons. Keep your wits about you and your head on straight.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — You'll find yourself missing the way things used to be, and you'll have a chance to relive a favorite outing with a loved one.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Put your best foot forward at all times. You cannot afford to be taken for anything less than you really are.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — Someone you work with may make you nervous. Are you sure you're not seeing things from an overly sensitive point of view?

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — You won't be able to take advantage of anyone, so you might as well resign yourself to doing things according to accepted rules.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — You and a friend may realize, suddenly, that things are developing just a little differently between you than you had anticipated.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — You're likely to receive a message that is difficult at first to decipher. Do your best, and try to read between the lines.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — A friend will be grateful for a favor you granted recently, and he or she will ask for another before the day is out. Grant it freely.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — Someone is looking out for you, even if you're not looking out for yourself, so you can be sure — almost — to avoid major pitfalls.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — You're likely to be visited — and revisited — by someone who has discovered that he or she can learn a great deal from you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — You've been thinking a great deal about changing jobs, but you may realize that you are, after all, in just the right place for now.

EXOTIC PETS

Live Online

From washingtonpost.com/liveonline

WAYNE PACELLE, senior vice president of the United States Humane Society, was online Wednesday and discussed the popularity of owning exotic pets and the dangers involved in doing so.

What animals do you define as "exotic?" For instance, would a gecko or a ferret be considered exotic and therefore wrong to have?

An "exotic," for our purposes, is a wild animal not indigenous to the United States. A gecko is an exotic wild animal. A ferret is a domesticated strain or European polecat.

How were Siegfried and Roy allowed to keep and breed those animals? Wasn't that illegal? Also, if they cancel their show, what will happen to those cats?

Siegfried and Roy have permits from the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to keep and exhibit these animals. Because Siegfried and Roy have considerable resources, the animals will continue to live at their facility.

Is there any kind of law that requires people who have exotic pets (especially ones that could be dangerous) to notify their immediate neighbors? An out-of-control animal poses a potential threat not only to the owner, but, if it got out, to neighbors as well.

The answer is no, but the point you make is a compelling argument for the adoption of local and state bans against keeping dangerous, exotic wild animals as pets. Some locales do require this kind of notification, but it's rare. The issue is, we should not look to "manage" the problem through regulation, but to support bans on keeping wild animals as pets to prevent interactions between people and exotic wild pets.

Singer Celine Dion wants to bond with your baby through the "Miracle" project.

ALLIANCES Fearful Symmetry

Singer CELINE DION and Australian photographer Anne Geddes are working together on the "Miracle" project, a collection of songs and images honoring the "unbreakable bond of love that exists between a mother and her baby." Geddes is famed for her portraits of infants inside pumpkins, honey pots and other vessels. The project, which both artists agree "comes straight from our hearts," is slated for worldwide release in October 2004. (AP)

DENIALS Next Time, Don't Talk

VAL KILMER says he was misquoted in Rolling Stone when it came to New Mexico. The actor, who owns a ranch there, said he'll ask the magazine to apologize. "I didn't say I live in the homicide capital of the Southwest,"

he said. Another comment — that he carries a gun in his car while driving with his kids because there are so many drunk drivers in the area — "doesn't make sense." Rolling Stone stands by the article. (AP)

TOMES G.O.A.T. Man

Raising his fists and striking a fighting pose, MUHAMMAD ALI greeted an adoring crowd at the Frankfurt Book Fair Thursday who cheered on the former heavyweight champ as he presented a monumental book chronicling his life. The 800-page volume — titled "G.O.A.T. (Greatest of All Time)" — weighs in at a massive 75 pounds and will cost about $3,500. Only 10,000 copies will be printed. (AP)

PUNISHMENTS Cheech Cannot Follow

Actor-comedian TOMMY CHONG reported to a privately run federal prison Wednesday to serve his nine-month sentence for conspiring to sell bong and other drug paraphernalia over the Internet even as his attorneys prepared to argue for his release pending appeal. Chong, 65, was sentenced Sept. 11 in Pittsburgh. At his sentencing, Chong said he got carried away with his fictional persona, but had quit smoking pot and wanted to use his celebrity to help people stay off drugs. (AP)
